“We’re going on tour!” frontman Pat Monahan wrote last night on the band’s official website. “The Play That Song Tour is happening this summer across North America, and we’re bringing along our friends in O.A.R. & Natasha Bedingfield to join in on the fun.”

Train was formed in San Francisco in 1993, and its first album went platinum in 1998, led by the hit single “Meet Virginia.” They followed up with a series of albums sporting big hits like “Drops of Jupiter,” “Calling All Angels” and “Hey, Soul Sister.” The band is releasing its new album on the same day that tickets are for sale. “A girl a bottle a boat” is Train’s 10th studio album. The first single from the album, “Play That Song,” is No. 68 on Billboard’s Hot 100 chart. It will be Train’s first set of original music since 2014’s “Bulletproof Picasso,” which debuted at No. 5 on the Billboard 200.
