The bands previously teamed up for a co-headlining tour in summer 2016, and Matchbox Twenty frontman Rob Thomas says “nothing feels like home as much as playing these songs with these guys and it never will.” “To be honest, we took a vote after last year and decided to spend every summer with Rob from now on,” Counting Crows’ Adam Duritz added in a statement. “Can. Not. Wait.”

Matchbox Twenty’s last album was 2012’s North, while Counting Crows most recent record was 2014’s Somewhere Under Wonderland.
