Last Nov, the seven-time grammy winning country trio of Charles Kelley, Hillary Scott, and Dave Haywood released their latest album Ocean, which provides the tour with its name. On May 21st, the Ocean 2020 Tour gets underway in Albuquerque, New Mexico, and runs through the remainder of summer, with 41 dates scheduled at present and supporting guests Jake Owen and Maddie & Tae on board for the duration. Notable stops include the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles, the Budweiser Stage in Toronto, and a September 12th show at Nashville's Bridgestone Arena to close out this leg. promotional video for the tour shows Lady Antebellum, Owen, and Maddie & Tae convening at popular Nashville karaoke bar Santa's Pub (with its bearded namesake owner tending bar in the background) to come up with some ideas for a collaborative cover song. They take turns trying out a variety of popular hits like Chumbawumba's "Tubthumping," Whitney Houston's "I Wanna Dance With Somebody," Destiny's Child's "Say My Name," and TLC's "Waterfalls" before coming together in lovely harmony on Bill Medley and Jennifer Warnes' "(I've Had) The Time of My Life." Asking for feedback from Santa, the bar owner growls in response, "Sure ain't country."

Ocean is Lady Antebellum's seventh studio album and includes the lead single "What If I Never Get Over You," which finished out 2019 by moving into the country airplay Top 5 with some momentum. "After our Vegas residency and working on this record for the past year we are itching to get back out on the road and see how the fans gravitate to some of the deeper cuts off of Ocean," Lady Antebellum member Charles Kelley said. "We've missed those huge crowd sing-alongs and we are looking forward to having Jake Owen and Maddie & Tae light up the stage every night. May can't come fast enough."
