Country superstar Tim McGraw is gearing up to launch a massive tour in 2022 and he's bringing Russell Dickerson, Alexandra Kay and Brandon Davis along for the ride. Multi-platinum recording artist Russell Dickerson will provide direct support, while Alexandra Kay and Brandon

Davis, who made waves covering McGraw's songs on TikTok will serve as opening acts. Both Alexandra Kay and Brandon Davis shared covers that the "7500 OBO" singer discovered on TikTok and applauded.

This winter, fans can catch McGraw on the small screen, playing the role of James Dutton in the highly anticipated Yellowstone prequel, 1883. Written by Taylor Sheridan, the show also stars Faith Hill and Sam Elliott.

Known for bringing attention to up-and-coming artists, McGraw continues to shine a spotlight on several artists that are lighting up social media with their music, including Alexandra Kay and Brandon Davis, who will also join McGraw as opening acts on his forthcoming tour. Earlier this year, Kay's cover of "Don't Take The Girl" went viral after McGraw took to socials to applaud her take on the song. McGraw also showed his support for rising country singer Brandon Davis, teaming up with him for a virtual duet of McGraw's "Something Like That."
