Southern California-bred rock/reggae stalwarts Slightly Stoopid and Dirty Heads will team up this summer to co-head the "Slightly Dirty Summer Tour," Special guests The Elovators will join across all dates on the tour. Slightly Stoopid and Dirty Heads are proud to partner with Maui Food Bank so that $1 from every ticket sold will help support their mission to help the hungry on Maui.

San Diego-based Slightly Stoopid's annual summer caravan is highly anticipated by fans, and this year is no different. Last year, “Summertime 2023” with Sublime with Rome hit more than 25 sheds across the U.S., and over the last three years the WME-represented band has averaged 7,521 tickets sold per show. Dirty Heads, hailing from Huntington Beach, California, follows in the OC reggae/rock footsteps of bands like No Doubt, Sublime with Rome, Slightly Stoopid and others that found their unique sound south of Los Angeles. Over the last three years, the band has averaged 1,830 tickets per show. Dirty Heads is booked by Steve Gordon at United Talent Agency.

“Slightly Dirty Summer 2024 is gonna be nuts!, says Slightly Stoopid founder Miles Doughty in a statement. “It’s been a minute since we did a full summer tour with our brothers the Dirty Heads and we are excited to get this party started. Joining us in the madness will be our boys Common Kings and The Elovaters taking the vibes to a new level! Looking forward to playing some new songs all summer while hitting new venues and some cities we have never played!” .. Dirty Heads’ Duddy B adds, “So happy to be back out on the road with our boys! Every time we get together it’s nothing but good times and I expect nothing less this summer!”
